Dear Parents and Carers,

This week it has been great to see HCCPA's full remote learning offer come together. The children have worked so hard, whether they are in school or at home. I know children and teachers have really enjoyed seeing everyone in the live lessons and it has been so lovely to hear the children all saying hello to each other over their devices.

Online Safety

It is so easy to think that children who are 4, 5 and 6 are too young to be worrying about being safe online but we live in a world which is completely intertwined with the internet. Children access it through their tablets, phones, smart speakers, the TV, watches and more. It certainly isn't just the family PC anymore. At this young age it is important for children to understand what an incredible resource the internet is but also how it can be dangerous too.

It was great to celebrate National Safer Internet Day (a little early) this week. This year's focus 'An Internet We Trust' is very apt, considering all the misinformation that 2020 and now 2021 has brought. It has never been easier to answer a question or research a topic, which is why it is so important that, at a young age, children question the information which is put in front of them and think about the reliability of its source. Encourage your children to ask questions like... DigiDuck.

Have a great weekend! Mr Redman
